

I would like to log a complaint about the Super Bowl half time ceremony. It was all in bad taste - not just the Janet Jackson episode - and did not provide a good "scene" for kids or parents. I understand that CBS officials attended rehearsals all week; certainly, they would have noticed that show was only hip-hop, rap, flag wearing, and suggestive dancing. Where did they hide good judgment? Additionally, commercials for erectile disfunction do not belong on mainstream TV. This was not a case of "let the market decide". It was a publicly funded stadium holding a football game - not a rock concert.
